The League of Evil infiltrates Croisette

MIPCOM JNR: Vancouver animation specialist Nerd Corps Entertainment has a new comedy action-adventure show in development that it is shopping to buyers in Cannes.

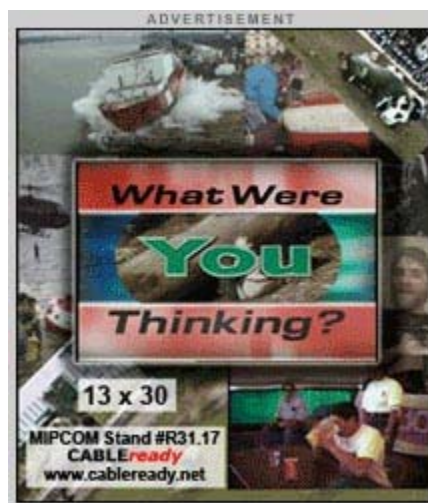

The League of Evil (26x30'), aimed at eight- to 12-year-olds, follows a band of four Super Villains with global supremacy as their main goal. Their plans are marred, however, by the fact that they are completely incompetent and are competing for the same thing with a number of unemployed villains who happen to live in the same city.

"Comedy is the hardest genre to get right, but this is laugh-out-loud," said Ken Faier, president of Nerd Corps.

The group is led by diminutive evil genius The Great Voltar, and includes such wannabe bad guys as once-great mad scientist Doctor Surgeon Clown Frogg, ex-Soviet super villain Reginald 'Red' Menace – actually a stay-at-home dad and all round nice guy – and Armageddon, who is more like a "hyperactive Neanderthal toddler."

The company has been developing the series for about one year, after being pitched the concept at last year's Ottawa Animation Festival by three Montreal-based animators just out of school.

Nerd Corps has invited the trio to move to Vancouver for six months to work on The League of Evil and some of its other shows, such as Teem Awethum, to help develop their skills.
